

The law of self-realization is an unshakable, inescapable law

¹The law of self includes everything that belongs to practical activity, the art of living, and to realization.

²Knowledge of the other laws of life is necessary for true understanding of life, of course, but application falls within the sphere of self-realization.

³The law of self-realization is an unshakable, inescapable law that is valid for all beings in all worlds and all kingdoms from the fourth kingdom up. In the lowest three kingdoms, consciousness development proceeds in group-souls, automatically through the acquisition of experience during eons. However, as soon as the self has started to function (the monad has acquired self-consciousness), it must by itself acquire all the qualities and abilities necessary for further consciousness development, by itself acquire self-consciousness in ever higher kinds of passive consciousness in ever higher kinds of matter.
