

“science” has an air of infallibility which is grotesque

¹There are many different so-called sciences. The very word “science” has its lustre from the exact sciences, the mathematical ones, the only true sciences. The power of words over thought is immense, however, and everything denoted by the term “science” has an air of infallibility, which is grotesque. According to the thoughtless parroting of public opinion, everything called “science” is “scientifically demonstrated” as well, and then there is no use trying to have the pertaining foolish statements corrected....

[...] ⁵Nor can philosophy be called science in the original sense of the word “science”, since it deals with people’s highly subjective conceptions, pure speculation on reality.

⁶History as a scientific discipline also is of a dubious character. It is certainly possible to establish facts about the past, but those facts are not very numerous, and most so-called historical facts are questionable, to say the least....

[...] Continue reading, scroll to 20.14 Every So-Called Science is Not Science 20 SCIENCE

Translated from Swedish in the hylozoically direct style. Original books of essays are found on the drop-down at top-left of page at laurency.com. Knowledge of Life Five hylozoicExcerpts